WORSE THAN DEATH.

A popular Hebrew legend runs as follows: At the time when Solomon the Wise had just completed the book "Ecclesiastes," the Angel of Death appeared before God complaining that the wisest man on earth committed such folly as to write: "I find more bitter than death the woman whose heart is snares and nets."—Ecc. vii. 26. "What," said the Angel of Death, "knoweth a man of the bitterness of death? Hath he ever witnessed, like myself, the dying of a father of a poor family, leaving a loving wife and a dozen of dear children in utter destitution! or a beloved child dying in the arms of its fond parents?" "What," answered God, dost thou know of the bitterness of a vicious wife? Suppose I grant thee twenty years to live on earth like other men, that thou mayest search into this matter and then form an opinion?" Said and done. The Angel of Death left some one in his place, and he himself came down to the terrestrial spheres. He was not on earth very long before he fell in deep love with a beautiful damsel. He proposed to her; she accepted, and the marriage was performed. They were the happiest couple on earth. This happy state, however, did not last long, for she became dissatisfied with ordinary life, and wanted to have all the fineries in superfluity, which her husband could not well afford, and the strife began. It grew from day to day bitterer, from bad to worse, and its bitterness can better be imagined than described. Their union was blessed with a boy, whom the father dearly loved, and whom he instructed as well as he could. The years glided by very slowly; but it came at last that the Angel of Death had to return to his celestial abode, and he took his boy aside and told him: "My son, now I tell thee who I am. I am the Angel of Death, and tomorrow will be recalled to Heaven and leave you here. I want to make you rich; therefore, I advise you to become a doctor. You need no extra knowledge for that; you simply look, when you enter the sick room, where I am standing. If at the feet of the patient you may prescribe pure water, or anything you choose, and it will cure; should you, however, see me at the head, then make no attempt whatever to cure the patient, for it will be to no avail." And the Angel of Death left. The son moved to where he was not known and began to practice as doctor with great success. He accumulated fortunes and his name grew great. One day the magistrate of the city fell sick, and after all the prominent physicians gave him up, this new doctor was sent for, but, alas! as he entered he saw his father standing at the head of the bed. Determined to add greatness to his name he ordered two strong men to be sent for; they came, and he ordered them to turn the bed so that the Angel of Death remained standing at the foot of the bed, and the magistrate was cured.

Noon after the King was seriously ill, and after all other physicians gave him up the young doctor was again summoned, and, horror! the Angel of death was crouched on the bed and clinging to the head of the King. "All shall go out!" the young physician ordered, and all went out, leaving him alone with the sick King. As he was thus left alone he began to pace the floor impatiently; his father, the Angel of Death, broke the silence by the faint expression: "Give it up, my son, for this time you cannot outdo me." "Oh!" said he, "I am only waiting for you to come." Away jumped the father, exclaiming as he ran: "Oh, if she is coming I cannot stay. She made my life bitter enough with her presence, and the King was cured. The Angel of Death was now brought before the great tribunal to answer why he so neglected the second time (Continued on page 4.)

THE EVILS OF PAINTING

And their Remedy.

"It has been said with much truth, too, that house painting might, with study and acquirement of taste, resume its rank as a liberal art."—Painters' Manual.

Believing the above to be true, A. B. KERR has now re-organized his system of working the business in Honolulu. In the first place he has secured the services of that celebrated artist, Mr. Max Koutz, formerly of San Francisco, whose work in the line of plain and decorative paper-hanging, frescoing, &c., is up to the present time unsurpassed, and on these Islands has never been equalled. For house painting jobs first-class mechanics only will be employed. In future patrons can depend upon my filling every order on the most scientific basis known to the trade.

The Sign Painting and Lettering department will be permanently presided over by Mr. GEO. STRATMEYER, (further comment unnecessary.) His—Send for designs of frescos for ceiling and cornices. Something new; and if you want any glass put in call at
